what staying in it made possible

An encounter with something that only became visible because you didn't resolve the confusion too soon.

🕒 15 MINUTES

THE MESS

1. Think of a time you stayed in genuine confusion — about a situation, a relationship, a decision — longer than was comfortable, and came out the other side seeing it differently.
2. Write down what staying in that middle actually produced. Not a general lesson — something specific that shifted.
3. Ask: what would have been lost if you had resolved it earlier?

Notice: whether the confusion and the clarity were part of the same process, not opposites.

NO OUTCOME REQUIRED.
