

S · SURRENDER

good enough to leave alone

An encounter with a moment that doesn't need a verdict.

🕒 10 MINUTES

THE MESS

1. Think of something coming up in the next day or two that you'd like to enjoy — something low-stakes and genuinely pleasant. Write it down.
2. Write down the standard you're already bringing to it. What would make it a good experience? What would make it fall short? Be honest — most of us have a picture in mind before we arrive.
3. Now write down what it would mean to show up without that standard. Not with low expectations — with no measurement at all. What would you actually be paying attention to instead?

Notice: whether releasing the standard feels like relief or like losing something.

NO OUTCOME REQUIRED.
