An encounter with a situation you can't stay outside of.

🕒 15 MINUTES

THE MESS

1. Go somewhere something is already happening without you — a conversation in progress, people working together, a room filling up, something being made or cooked or built. Don't bring a task. Don't decide in advance what role you'll play.
2. At some point, let yourself be pulled in. Follow whatever catches your attention, even if it seems beside the point. Don't redirect toward something more useful.
3. After you leave, notice what from this encounter keeps surfacing in your thinking. Don't chase it — just notice when it returns.

Notice: what keeps coming back after the encounter is officially over.

NO OUTCOME REQUIRED.
