

M · MONITOR

the shape of the problem

An encounter with the question you haven't asked yet.

THE MESS

1. Think of something that's been bothering you — at home, at work, or both. Write it down in one sentence, the way you'd normally describe it.
2. Read it back and ask: what does this leave out? Where does the problem "start" in your version — and is that actually where it starts?
3. Write a second sentence describing the same situation, but from a different starting point. Make it as different from your first version as you can.

Notice: how the second version changes what feels solvable.

NO OUTCOME REQUIRED.
