the shape it wants

An encounter with what your work is already telling you about how it wants to go.

THE MESS

1. Pick something you're working on. Write down the constraints that are fixed and can't change.
2. Instead of working against those fixed points, treat them as the shape of the work. Write down what they make possible rather than what they block.
3. Notice if the work looks different from this angle.

Notice: what the constraint has been protecting all along.

NO OUTCOME REQUIRED.
