

S · SURRENDER

not knowing

An encounter with a feeling you can't identify.

🕒 10 MINUTES

THE MESS

1. Find a feeling you currently have that you can't name — something present but unclear. If nothing surfaces immediately, sit quietly for two minutes. Something will.
2. Stay with it without trying to resolve it. Set a timer for five minutes. When you want to label it, notice the impulse — but don't follow it yet.
3. When the timer ends, write one phrase that gets close. Not a single word, but a phrase. "Something like dread but also curiosity" counts. Accuracy matters less than honesty.

Notice: whether the not-knowing itself has a texture — heavy or light, familiar or strange.

NO OUTCOME REQUIRED.
