

M · MONITOR

from here

An encounter with what you can see about something now that you couldn't see while you were in it.

🕒 15 MINUTES

THE MESS

1. Think of something you've been through that you'd describe differently today than you did at the time. Not a crisis — just something you lived through and have some distance from now. Write one sentence about how you described it then.
2. Write one sentence about how you'd describe it now. Don't worry about which version is more accurate. Just notice that there are two.
3. Write down one specific thing you can see from here that you genuinely couldn't see from there. Not a lesson. Just something that's visible now that wasn't before.

Notice: whether the distance feels like clarity, or just a different kind of partial view.

NO OUTCOME REQUIRED.
