saving it for what matters

An encounter with the freedom that comes from deciding in advance.

🕒 10 MINUTES

THE MESS

1. Simon's core insight was simple: stop spending cognitive resources on decisions that don't deserve them. Save them for the work that does. Write down the three things that matter most to you right now — the places where your best thinking genuinely needs to go.
2. Now identify one decision you are currently maximizing (searching endlessly for the perfect answer) that has nothing to do with those three things.
3. Set a good-enough standard for it. Write it down in one sentence.

Notice: whether the energy you free up actually goes where you intended.

NO OUTCOME REQUIRED.
