someone else's scoreboard

An encounter with the target shaping someone else's choices.

🕒 15 MINUTES

THE MESS

1. Think of someone whose behavior toward you is shaped by a number: a coworker chasing a target, a kid chasing a grade, anyone working to a quota.
2. Ask yourself, or ask them directly: what does hitting that number make them do? What does it make them skip?
3. Notice where the number and the real goal point in different directions, and whether you've been judging them by the number too.

Notice: how a target meant to help can quietly push the real goal aside.

NO OUTCOME REQUIRED.
