what you can't count

An encounter with what matters but won't be measured.

🕒 10 MINUTES

THE MESS

1. Think about a part of your life that matters a lot: a relationship, your health, a piece of work, your home.
2. Write down what's good about it right now using no numbers at all. Just describe it, the way you'd tell a friend.
3. Sit with the fact that none of that showed up as a number, and it still counts. Maybe it counts most.

Notice: how much of what matters never makes it onto a scoreboard.

NO OUTCOME REQUIRED.
