

E · EXECUTE

one small revolution

An encounter with the action you keep arriving back at.

🕒 10 MINUTES

THE MESS

1. Name one thing you have tried to do — a habit, a practice, a change — that keeps slipping. Don't explain why it slipped. Just name it plainly.
2. Do the smallest possible version of that thing right now. Not a plan to do it. The thing itself, scaled down until it takes less than three minutes.
3. Write one sentence about what it felt like to do it again, knowing you have been here before.

Notice: whether starting again feels lighter when you stop calling it starting over.

NO OUTCOME REQUIRED.
