THE MESS

1. Think of something you have been through before — a loss, a conflict, a stretch of difficulty — that you are now, in some form, going through again. Describe it in one sentence.
2. List three things you can bring to it this time that you couldn't bring the last time you were here. Skills, perspectives, relationships — anything real and specific.
3. Write one sentence about what you are ready to put down now that you were still carrying then.

Notice: whether you are above or below where you were.

NO OUTCOME REQUIRED.
